THE QUEEN’S MEDICAL CENTER NAMES LESLIE CHUN AS VICE PRESIDENT, MEDICAL STAFF SERVICES/
CHIEF QUALITY OFFICER

HONOLULU – The Queen’s Medical Center (QMC) has named Leslie Brian Chun, M.D., as Vice President, Medical Staff Services/Chief Quality Officer.

As the Chief Quality Officer, Dr. Chun will work with physician leaders on credentialing, peer review, clinical standards and other medical staff issues. He will also be working closely with Cindy Kamikawa, Chief Nursing Officer, on maintaining quality standards across the Institution. Dr. Chun will be reporting to Dr. Whitney Limm, Senior Vice President of Clinical Integration.

Dr. Chun most recently served as the Chief of Clinical and Medical Affairs for Maui Memorial Medical Center for the past three years. Prior to this, Dr. Chun was at Partners Healthcare, the largest health care system in New England, for approximately 10 years. His most recent role at Partners Healthcare was as the Director of Health Care Quality at Newton-Wellesley Hospital. Dr. Chun also served on the faculty of Harvard Medical School and was on the medical staff of Newton-Wellesley Hospital and Massachusetts General Hospital. He has worked as a hospitalist and physician in the Massachusetts General Hospital Medical Walk-in Clinic.

Dr. Chun grew up in Honolulu and is a graduate of Iolani School. He also graduated from Harvard University with a Bachelor’s degree in Biological Sciences and continued his education at UCLA David Geffen School of Medicine where he received his M.D. and his M.B.A. from the UCLA Anderson School of Business. Dr. Chun completed his internship and residency in Internal Medicine at Massachusetts General Hospital, and is boarded in Internal Medicine.
